“ Alicia webber This is to my papa Daniel Webber. When I was little, he would hold me in his arms and say will she ever start talking oh dont say that grandma said she's gonna start talking faster than you know it isnt that the truth I started to talk one month after that and papa said will she ever stop talking and I haven't stopped yet. Thats a great moment to remember. bye!!

“ Maureen Little Debbie Webber has been one of my closest friends for almost 36 years since we started at the Secretary of State office in Troy. We have shared many ups and downs of our personal lives with each other during our friendship. I wanted to speak at the funeral, but wasn't sure I could do so without crying, so here are my comments about Debbie and Dan.

“ jim vanhollebeke I've missed Dan for a long time now. And I will continue to miss him the rest of my life. We met through our mutual admiration for Elvis Presley and though we met in person only one time, our friendship continued to grow through many many years of correspondence. Dan loved nostalgia and so did I. We shared many memories and reveled in each other's humorous snafus and mis-adventures. He loved to laugh and was always supportive and upbeat. I don't think I've ever met a nicer person or more loyal friend. Dan always talked of getting together, but in reality his business seemed to demand much of his time. I marveled at his willingness to put everything but himself first. If only I could tell him personally how much I've missed his communications and comraderie...and more importantly, how I will always continue to do so...until we meet again. God bless you Dan. May your new journey bring you endless joy and peace! Sincerely your friend, ~Jim vanHollebeke, Redford, MI

“ Brenda I'll never forget all those times when I would try to feed you lunch and you wanted to talk~mostly tell jokes. I still haven't figured out the answer to the one riddle you told me about all those cats.....and I do think about it all the time! You had the biggest smirk on your face when you told me to just think about it, that it would make sense. Thank you for all the memories. I know I will always remember you! Brenda D.....
